

Four Corners is used with selected response questions to identify groups of students with similar responses to the question asked. Students move to a corner of the room designated to match their response or similar way of thinking. (Four almost true statements)

Four Corners

Corner A is almost correct because

The part of the answer that I believe is incorrect is

I know this is incorrect because

Four Corners

Corner A is almost correct because

The part of the answer that I believe is incorrect is

I know this is incorrect because

Four Corners

Corner A is almost correct because

The part of the answer that I believe is incorrect is

I know this is incorrect because

Four Corners

Corner A is almost correct because

The part of the answer that I believe is incorrect is

I know this is incorrect because